WAR BULLETINS

Showing Progress of the Conflict in the Far East.

JAPANESE FLEET

Captures Four Russian Torpedo Boat Destroyers—Three Staff Officers Hanged as Spies.

The following bulletins show the progress of the Japanese-Russian war since our last issue:

FEBRUARY 18—Vice-Admiral Aleksei reported that the Russians lost 15 men killed and five officers in the naval battle at Port Arthur on February 9. A St. Petersburg official statement placed the blame for Russia's unpreparedness and the consequent reverses on the czar's desire for peace.

FEBRUARY 19—One thousand five hundred Koreans crossed Yalu river to Wiji, Korea. Russian gunboat Mandjur placed at Shanghai was dismantled to escape capture by the Japanese cruiser.

FEBRUARY 20—Port Arthur was shelled by Russian torpedoes on the Korean border between Korea and Japan, in which some of the latter were captured. Russian troops began concentrating between Newchwang and Mukden, Manchuria.

FEBRUARY 22—Japanese fleet captured four Russian torpedo boat destroyers. Russia ordered the Jews of Siberia cities to leave their homes and to be sent to the Far East.

FEBRUARY 23—Three Japanese staff officers who attempted to blow up a Manchurian railroad bridge were hanged as spies by the Russians from the girders of the bridge.

FEBRUARY 24—A Russian battleship, the Russian battleship, was sunk by Japanese torpedoes at Port Arthur on Tuesday night. It was evidently the intention of the Japanese to sink the battleship and bottle up the Russian fleet.

FEBRUARY 25—Three Japanese staff officers who attempted to blow up a Manchurian railroad bridge were hanged as spies by the Russians from the girders of the bridge.

FEBRUARY 26—A Russian battleship, the Russian battleship, was sunk by Japanese torpedoes at Port Arthur on Tuesday night. It was evidently the intention of the Japanese to sink the battleship and bottle up the Russian fleet.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

Unusual Happenings Out of the News of the Week.

ALTOONA, February 20.—Two boys driven by hunger into the city streets, this evening attacked the butcher delivery wagon of Peter Moran as the driver was making his last round among the suburban customers. One of the animals made a lunge at the horse and tore open its side with its great forepaw. The driver then ran for help, but when several men reached the scene of the encounter with guns, they found the horse dying and the boys gone.

ACCUSED OF RACE SUICIDE. Kenosha county, Wis., is accused of race suicide. The town of Bristol, with a population of 2,000, had only one birth in 1903; Wheatland, with 1,000 inhabitants, boasted but one baby last year; Brighton, the oldest town in Kenosha county, and peopled by sturdy German farmers, reported four births. One of these were seven old people still living on a single street in the city of Kenosha.

A GREY MONKEY. Consul, the famous monkey in the Boston animal circus, who has performed before hundreds of thousands of people in this country and was the most highly trained and intelligent monkey civilization has ever known, died in Berlin, Germany, on Sunday, of pneumonia. His life was insured for $100,000. Consul is estimated to have earned $75,000 a year for the Boston show. His body has been embalmed and sent to Mr. Boston, who is in Paris. Consul was five years old. He slept in a bed, wore tailor-made clothing and would only eat when asked with a napkin and knife and fork. He smoked a pipe, cigars and cigarettes alike. His favorite exercise was the riding of a two-wheeled bicycle, which he steered with the certainty of a man.

"EXTRAORDINARY" EXPLOSIONS. A despatch from Richmond, Va., says: "A report which seemed to indicate that a bombardment on a small scale was in progress at about 10 P. M. Tuesday, a farmer of New Kent county, to his home on Saturday. On the floor he found several fowls mutilated and dying and as he was speculating on the cause of their death, he heard another explosion and a hen fell from her nest. Investigating the strange occurrence, Mr. Tunnell ascertained that the severe cold weather had frozen the eggs, and when they began to thaw out, in consequence of the warmth of the hens, they exploded. The mutilated fowls were dropped for the table and in the process pieces of egg shells were found all through their bodies, where they had been driven by the force of the explosion."

WILL OF Mrs. Phoebe Coughenour. late of Loudoun county, deceased, has been filed in the register's office. Testatrix bequeaths her personal property to her children and the offspring of her deceased daughter, Mrs. Susan B. Coughenour, and her husband, George and John W. Coughenour, in equal shares. Her real estate is to be equally divided among her three sons, who are to pay $2,000—$666 2/3 to Mrs. Edward Coughenour, the same amount to the children of Mrs. Susan B. Coughenour and a like sum to the children of Mrs. Sarah J. Burns. The residue of her estate is to be divided among her three sons, George, John W. Coughenour and John W. Coughenour, who are named as executors.

A Good Program. The lecture to be given in the court house next Wednesday evening by Capt. James M. Coughenour, of Williamsburg, will be on the subject "The Logic We Leave Our Children." Admission being free, every seat in the room should be taken. The subject appeals to every parent, it interests every citizen, it concerns every child. The general public has been cordially invited to be present. The lecture will be the singing of the high school pupils under the direction of Prof. Coughenour. During the lecture the directors' convention, to be held on Wednesday and Thursday next, several prominent school directors of the county will speak. Death of a Child. Vergie Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Andrew S. and Minnie Grubbs, died at the home of her parents near Lottsburg, on February 20, aged three years, one month and 22 days. Little Vergie was a sweet, healthy child, with a gentle disposition. She was the pet of the family and will be greatly missed by her parents and two little sisters, who are left to mourn their loss.

Another Valuable Dog Poisoned. A short time ago some anti-social scoundrels, "Duchess," the thoroughbred Irish bull setter owned by Master Forrest Troutman, the little son of George J. Troutman, foreman of The Gazette's composing rooms, "Duchess" was purchased by J. H. Hayne for $100 and presented to Master Troutman. She was a quiet, well-behaved dog and a general favorite. It is hard to realize why anybody should want to kill a canine like this, or, in fact, any of the other valuable dogs that have met a similar fate within the past year or two. We are ashamed to acknowledge that Bedford harbors such a crowd of scoundrels. Mr. Troutman offers ten dollars for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the poisoner.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

A Splendid Attraction.

The entertainment which will be given in the opera house by the Morphet and Stevenson company next Monday evening will delight all who attend. Mr. Morphet is a delight of the hand and person whose dignity and originality are seldom, if ever, equalled. He carries an unusually large line of magical ropes, Mr. Stevenson is a shiflet triple-toned cornet soloist and instrumentalist. He plays solos on banjo, violin, chime, glasses and new and novel instruments and, with Mr. Morphet, presents a splendid musical act. The whole program is varied and pleasing. Tickets on sale at Irvin's drug store and can be obtained from members of the Bedford Athletic association. Admission, 25, 50 and 100 cents. The best of order will be maintained, so that no one need remain away for fear of being annoyed by rowdiness.

The Rational Care of the Complexion.

DANGER OF COSMETICS.

Advice from Christine Terhune Herriek, Author of "Cradle and Nursery," First Aid to the Young Housekeeper.

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Terhune Herriek.)

Was there ever a woman who did not wish to be good looking? If so, she must have been, in the childlike phase, "too good to be true." That is, unless she was already so pretty that she felt she had nothing more in this line to ask of Fate.

Even the beautiful woman must take care of her good looks. Nature may bestow these but she does not undertake to keep them in order. Once in a rare season one finds a woman whose complexion seems to take care of itself, but she is such an exception that it is hardly worth while to bring her case into consideration. The majority of women have to work to keep their skins in order and their efforts must be the more strenuous if they have been careless of them in youth.

When I speak of care of the complexion I do not mean that one must devote herself too constantly to this work. Very few busy women can afford to give the time that complexion specialists declare essential to the preservation of beauty. When one sees a woman who does all demanded of her in this line she is not likely to have leisure for anything else.

I know one such woman. In her girlhood she was the acknowledged belle of her native place. Her complexion was exquisite, her features were regular. Having won the reputation of a beauty she felt she must live up to it. She has done so, and it has taken her time. At forty-five she is still engaged in preserving her charms. She never rises until eleven o'clock. She is most diligent in the care of her diet. The time she spends upon facial and bodily massage leaves her time for anything else. Verily, she has her reward. Her golden tresses are plentiful and smooth, although there is a touch of something not entirely due to nature in their coloring. Her rose tint of skin is still to be seen, although it may not be as fluctuating as when it was altogether home made. Her figure she has been able to retain by dint of exercise and she is still a beautiful woman. But has it been worth while? There are very few women who would think it, or who, thinking so, would be able to give the time to achieve the result. Too few find it feasible to follow the rules by which Patti declares she has held her youth with her so long—three square meals a day, eight hours' sleep at night and three hours' exercise daily in the open air. It would be a good thing if every woman could allow herself this treatment, but it is not for those who must work in their homes or elsewhere.

The benefit of the skin must be wrought from within outward, not from without alone. That is, the body must be kept in good working order by vigorous exercise and proper food and then the complexion will be the result of good complexion. No artificial applications in the world will help without these fundamentals. But when these are secured, there are other things to be done to preserve the complexion in order to make the face attractive.

In the first place, the face must be kept clean. Not only by mere washing with water and a cloth, or even by the use of soap and water, but by something more thorough than these. The surface soil may be taken from the skin by the ordinary washing, but to get the dust from the pores a more thorough course must be followed. An agent must be selected that will soften the skin and coax the dirt from its interstices.

Too much care cannot be given to the selection of the cream or skin food or whatever it may be that is used for this purpose. Cold creams by the score may be purchased but a large proportion of these do more harm than good, especially if applied to a delicate skin. Either they make it so tender that it chaps and scales readily, or else they promote a growth of hair, or they clog the skin. But there are good cold creams and if one will take pains it is not hard to make a choice.

In order to get the best result for the face it should be cleansed at bedtime. First it should be washed with a soft cloth dipped in warm water and rubbed on a good soap, or dipped in almond meal. To remove skin the latter is unsuited and their owners would do well to confine themselves to a good soap. Highly scented soaps should be avoided. A sponge should not be used for the face, pleasant as is the touch of it. The best judge says it is impossible to keep a sponge entirely clean, whereas the cloth can be made antiseptic. When the face has been washed—and the cloth should go into all the corners and be applied again—and again—the face must be rinsed in warm water and patted dry with a soft towel. In washing or in wiping stroke the face upward.

Now comes the cold cream. A little should be taken on the finger tips and rubbed into the skin, with outward and upward strokes from the middle of the face. The rubbing should not be too hard and yet there should be enough pressure brought to produce a glow and to stimulate the circulation. Back part of the face should be treated in detail. The forehead should be stroked from the middle toward the temples and up toward the hair. The temples should be rubbed and the corners about the eyes where the first fine wrinkles display themselves should receive special attention. All around the eyes the flesh should be massaged and the cold cream rubbed thoroughly. The lower part of the face, the skin about the lips and where the smile or the droop of the mouth has left lines must be treated. Afterward the cold cream must be wiped from the face with a soft cloth and the skin again washed and dried. If it is very dry in tendency a little more—a very little more—cold cream may be rubbed in and left on overnight, but the best judge is against leaving the grease on the face all night.

This is not a very troublesome business, although it may seem a burden to a tired woman when she goes to bed. But like every other care of the body it is a matter of habit, and once established, the custom of giving five minutes at bed time to beautifying comes to be taken as a matter of course. If a woman thinks the preservation of her complexion worth while she will not grudge this small amount of time bestowed upon it.

It is a possession of this sort of thing being done for the preservation of the complexion. If it is necessary to women who have good skins in the first place, it is much more essential for those who are not blessed in this respect, or who through carelessness have let their skins fall into a bad state. They will not get off as easily as the women who have naturally good skins or who have taken proper care of them. To redeem their looks they must follow the process I have described, even to the very end. They must take up facial massage more thoroughly, rubbing the lined forehead round and round with the finger tips, always stroking upward. This circular movement is to be given to the cheeks and about the eyes as well.

A great many women have a tendency to double chin as they advance in life; this, too, they can combat by rubbing, drawing the flesh upward from the throat toward the chin and stroking with the palm of the hand.

All this advice is not meant only for middle-aged women, however, although they need it more than young girls. These latter have the innocence of youth. They scorn these precautions, apparently thinking that their beauty of skin and color will abide with them forever. Once in a while one will find a girl who is prudent enough to appreciate the fact that she cannot trust her skin with utter neglect and expect it to retain its beauty. "But what can I do?" says one of them. "Must I give up golf and bicycling and horseback riding and boating in order to take care of my complexion?" By no means. On the contrary, it is

Don't forget the old man with the fish on his back.

For nearly thirty years he has been traveling around the world, and is still traveling, bringing health and comfort wherever he goes.

To the consumptive he brings the strength and flesh he so much needs.

To all weak and sickly children he gives rich and strengthening food.

To thin and pale persons he gives new firm flesh and rich red blood.

Children who first saw the old man with the fish are now grown up and have children of their own.

He stands for Scott's Emulsion of pure cod liver oil—a delightful food and a natural tonic for children, for old folks and for all who need flesh and strength.

by such exercise as this one keeps one's body in order and insures a good complexion. But do not be careless of the skin in your zeal for outdoor sport. These things ought you to do and not leave the others undone. Before you go for your outing rub a very little cold cream or skin food into your face. Rub it in well, so that it will be absorbed, not left to lie on the surface. Then wipe the face off with a soft cloth or dannel dipped in a little pure powder. Plain talcum is good for this, or even cornstarch. Do this work carefully, so that the powder will not lie on the skin in streaks. It is to protect the pores from dust and dirt. Then go ahead and enjoy your horseback or bicycle ride or your row or your game and don't think of your complexion. You have nothing more to do about it until you are at home again.

When you are back in the house proceed to cleanse your face by very much the same method that you use at bedtime. Wipe off the dust with a damp cloth and then wash in warm water. Never put cold water on the face after exercising. Apply the cream, wiping it off with a soft cloth. You will probably find a good deal of dust on this in spite of the first application of cream and powder. Wash again in clean, warm water, dry your face and, if you wish, dust with a little powder.

The girl who follows this plan will not escape tan altogether. Probably she will not wish to escape it, but will rather seek to have some evidence in her complexion of her outdoor life. But, at least, she is not likely to develop blotch and peel and be an eyesore to others and a distress to herself until the time when her face has become to a uniform hard red or brown.
